NUMB. 203.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 15, 1733.

YOUR impartiality in publiſhing the different ſentiments of ſeveral perſons on the ſame ſubject, hath encouraged me to ſend you theſe Obſervations on the Remarks on Dr. CLIFTON's ſtate of phyſick in your 201ſt Journal by one A. A. They are begun with an encomium on the performance. 'It contains, he ſays, the 'moſt phyſick in the leaſt compaſs of any book he ever 'met with'; then he informs us, 'that the Doctor hath 'preſumed to ſet up for himſelf in oppoſition to men infi-'nitely his ſuperiors, and to contradict the common opini-'on, without giving any reaſon for it.' I, being unacquainted with the Doctor, having never ſeen his book, and if I had, having no ſkill in phyſick, ſhall make no remarks on theſe objections, but what Mr. A. A. furniſheth me with himſelf.—Indeed it ſeems to me, and perhaps to all readers of leſs penetration than Mr. A. A. a contradiction, or at leaſt an improbability, that the Doctor ſhould write a book containing more in a leſs compaſs, than they who are infinitely his ſuperiors. —— Again, he ſays, 'the 'Doctor would have obliged us, by giving a ſketch of the 'opinions and practice of former times with what freedom 'he pleas'd, but ought to have been more ſparing in his 'reflections on the preſent;' but for what reaſon, I know not. Then he calls the Doctor's 'method of obſerving 'the progreſs of diſeaſes utterly impracticable, only fit 'for ſhow, amuſement and oſtentation, and not any real 'uſe and benefit', tho' in the two foregoing lines he ſays, 'hoſpitals might do ſuch a work to great advantage': that is, hoſpitals might do a thing impracticable; one of the aſſertions muſt be falſe. —— Then again, inveighing againſt a private man's ſetting up his own opinion againſt the general, he hath this remarkable ſentence, 'For 'my part, I have ſuch a regard for the faculty's honour, 'that wherever the practice of any particular phyſician 'claſhes with theirs, I immediately ſet him down for a 'quack, or one that has ſome under game to play'. O rare philoſopher! Has any thing hindered the improvement of knowledge, more than an over fond opinion of ARISTOTLE and the ancients? No. Yet Mr. A. A. would have the determinations of the faculty, ipſe dixits and ne ultras in medicine. I ask Mr. A. A. if he was a quack who firſt ſet up the modern practice in oppoſition to the then prevailing general opinion? Was he a quack in religion, who dared firſt diſſent from a church pretending to infallibility and univerſality? I wou'd ask him the ſame concerning every other improved art? and wou'd have Mr. A. A. conſider, that dogmatizing ſhews poverty and narrowneſs of ſpirit; that there is no greater vaſſalage, than that of being enſlaved to opinions. I might ſay much more, but ſhall conclude with Mr. A. A's own words, 'Theſe are a few of the 'many remarks that might be made on this celebrated 'performance, the reſt I ſhall ſend you perhaps at ano-'ther time.'

From your conſtant reader,

LAERTIUS.

A learned epiſtle, from I, PER SE I, Eſq; to MY OWN SELF.

My deareſt friend,

ALtho' it may be ſuperfluous, to trumpet your fame, that is ſo much upon the wing already, both at home, and beyond ſea; yet, as your brethren of the quill, frequently do themſelves the honour, to write letters to themſelves, and print them when they have done, I hope, from your wonted goodneſs (my dear BAVIUS) to have your ready pardon for this intruſion upon your precious moments: our ancient friendſhip, will not ſuffer you to take any thing amiſs, from me, the neareſt relation you have in the world.

It is now no ſecret, all over the kingdom, that you are upon your marriage to Mrs. PENELOPE MAMBRINO, the Batterſea heireſs, a young lady of great beauty and merit, with an ample fortune; as all the young ladies are, which the news-papers have marry'd of late years: and it is a wonder, that there are any more ſuch, in the nation, conſidering the great numbers of them, that are daily marry'd off. But if it be your deſtiny to marry this lady; ſuffer me, as one that wiſhes you well, to give you a word of advice, how to order your conduct towards her.

First, let it be your care, to let her have her way, in every thing that you yourſelf like: and this in the general. Secondly, if before marriage, ſhe abſolutely refuſeth any ſettlement, and forbids you to buy her a gold watch, or diamond necklace; be ſure you do not tranſgreſs her commands in either of thoſe particulars. If after marriage, ſhe refuſeth going to maſquerades, balls, plays, operas, or aſſemblies; do not contradict her. If it be her pleaſure to wear all her old cloaths over again for ſeven years together; buy no new ones, in all that time, let her have her way. If ſhe chuſeth to keep at home, and neither receive, nor pay viſits, and to drink water gruel, inſtead of tea, and burgundy; readily comply with her: for women of diſtinction, and fortune, do not love contradiction. If ſhe loves brandy; buy an anchor of it at a time, ſet it by her bed's ſide, in which put a neat braſs cock, and by it, ſet a handſome flint glaſs, that holds a quartern, and let her drink her fill: you cannot imagine how this will gain her affection. If ſhe is inclin'd to faſt twice a week, and to go to church twice every day; incourage her pious intentions. If ſhe is quiet and affable; never trouble yourſelf to aſk her for an ugly crooked word. If ſhe delights in her needle, and loves work; do not diſcourage her, but let her eat gold, if ſhe will earn it: and never quarrel with her, for letting you live at peace. If ſhe loves red herring with goosberry tarts, or muſtard with apple pye, gratify her inclination. If ſhe is ſick, and to ſave charges, will have no doctor, comply with her therein: and if ſhe can advance herſelf, at any time, by changing this life for a better; do not be her hinderance. Theſe are ſome of the many things, which I could inculcate to you; but your own wiſdom will ſuggeſt the reſt: do theſe, and be happy.

And now, as to yourſelf, it ſeems you are about to ſet up your chariot: inſtead of your own coat of arms, have a golden Pegaſus, painted on each door, with a Greek motto, to ſhew your extraordinary learning; let your horſes be york-ſhire greys, and your livery orange colour, becauſe it is all the mode. Keep good company, and good hours, and prize old friends, live ſoberly, and love your ſpouſe, read good books, eſteem a good reputation, pay your debts, live within compaſs, and be as brilliant as you pleaſe, ſo far as is conſiſtent with your ability and ſtation in the world, but no further. You will pardon this freedom, and verbum ſat ſapienti, as was the ſaying of your mother elect, the good old lady MAMBRINO, in her firſt letter to you. I am, with the greateſt veneration and ſincerity, dear Sir, your moſt obliged, moſt obedient,

and moſt humble ſervant,

DEMOCRITUS. I, PER SE I.

Dear GRUB,

I Here ſend you an imitation of the Eighteenth Idyllium of THEOCRITUS: it is a nuptial hymn ſung by a chorus of virgins, on the marriage of MENELAUS with HELEN; which I hope will not be unacceptable, as it certainly cannot be unſeaſonable at this preſent juncture. The original is full of the prettieſt rural images, and has a ſpirit of delicacy and ſweetneſs which he muſt have no ſkill in poetry who does not admire; and a great deal who knows how to imitate: in ſhort, the performers are the ſofteſt, and their ſong the moſt tender imaginable. You will find a few places that I have not touched upon: not that I thought 'em leſs beautiful than the reſt; but that I found greater difficulty in repreſenting them in an Engliſh dreſs. I am,

your moſt humble ſervant,

PASTOR FIDO.

Τμὰν, ὦ Τμέναιε, γάμῳ ἐπὶ τῷ δε χαρείης.

Theocrit.

In Sparta once, when MENELAUS led,
The bluſhing HELEN to the bridal bed;
A frolic quire of virgins blithe and gay,
Fair as the birth of ſpring, and mild as May,
(Their hair inwreath'd with each rich-tinctur'd flow'r)
To the ſoft cittern danc'd before the bow'r;
And while their feet in wanton meaſures play,
The ſoft aſſembly ſung this nuptial lay.

Hail prince, whom CYTHEREA waſted o'er,
With happy omens from thy native ſhore.
Oh! may her altars blaze, who gave thy love,
The radiant daughter of the Cretan Jove.
Oh! may the off-ſpring from that ſoft careſs,
In miniature the mother's charms expreſs;
Like her all gay, all blooming may he be,
He a new CUPID, as a VENUS ſhe.
We come, a beauteous train, who us'd to ſport
On ſmooth Eurota's banks, our cool reſort;
Where, bath'd with od'rous oils, each ſhining laſs,
Would dreſs her beauties in his natural glaſs.
Tho' each as bright as morn, as ev'ning fair,
Our forms their luſtre loſe, when HELEN's near:
For ſhe ſuperiour charms with ſprightlier grace,
And HARMONY with skill has form'd her face;
Nor does a ſofter bluſh AURORA deck,
Or tinge with livelier hue her ruddy cheek.
When o'er the web her curious fingers rove;
Who can behold her, and forbear to love?
With ſuch gay art the mingling colours join'd,
Expreſs each ſoft idea of her mind.
No tender nymph of all the virgin quire,
So ſweet can tune the voice, or touch the lyre.
She's perfect all; and nature joins with art,
To charm each eye, and raviſh ev'ry heart.
For thee, ſweet bride, we through the valleys ſtray;
But ſigh to find that HELEN is away:
A hundred nymphs, in beauty freſh and fair,
There cull the choiceſt flow'rs to bind thy hair;
Where fragrant hyacinths their forms diſcloſe,
The maiden lilly, and the ſilken roſe.
Then, while perfumes around their odours breathe,
We on the myrtle hang the various wreath:
And, grief diverting with our rural play,
Deep on the bark inſcribe this tender lay:
'Fair youths, and ſmiling maids, bow low to me,
'For I was VENUS' once, now HELEN'S tree.'
Hail wedded pair! and may you ſtill receive,
Each ſweet that you can wiſh, or HYMEN give;
May VENUS, and her ſon, for ever nigh,
With lighted torch your mutual flame ſupply.
Bleſt pair, in ſweet embraces lye reclin'd,
Your ſouls united, as your bodies join'd;
There ſleep till morn: —— but at the prime of day,
Awake, again to hear the bridal lay.
Rejoice, O HYMEN: for 'till now thy care,
Ne'er join'd a prince ſo gay, a nymph ſo fair.

Hyp-oratorical advertiſements and puffs in October. —— Hyp advertiſements, 3: Oratorial ditto, 6: in all 9: increaſed 2. —— Hyp puffs, 8: Oratorial ditto 4: in all 12: decreaſed 2.

N. B. The Hyp-doctor wrote his laſt advertiſement, and breathed out his laſt departing puff on tueſday Nov. 6.

THURSDAY, Nov. 8. Yeſterday about 12, his highneſs the prince of Orange arriv'd at Greenwich on board the Fubbs yacht, attended by the right hon. Horatio Walpole, Eſq; from whence his highneſs proceeded in one of his majeſty's barges to the Tower, where he arriv'd about 3: lord Lovelace went into the barge, and complimented his highneſs. As ſoon as his highneſs landed upon Tower-wharf, he was received by the governor of the Tower. Then his highneſs was taken up in one of the king's coaches, and conducted thro' the city, with loud acclamations, to Somerſet-houſe, attended by the lord Lovelace, Horatio Walpole, Eſq; and Sir Clement Cotterell. —— The proceſſion was begun by a party of the foot-guards, who march'd before the coach his highneſs was in, afterwards came his domeſticks in ſeveral other coaches, and laſtly the coaches of the peers and other perſons of diſtinction. As ſoon as the prince alighted at Somerſet-houſe, he was receiv'd by the dukes of Montagu and Devonſhire, and ſeveral other perſons of diſtinction. —— His highneſs immediately notify'd his arrival to the royal family, and pre-ſently after receiv'd the compliments of the king, queen, prince, and duke. —— His highneſs was met at his landing by the right hon. the earl of Leiceſter, governor of the Tower, &c. was preceded by ſeveral of the nobility in their coaches, &c. C. —— The prince is attended hither with more than 70 officers and domeſticks. D A. —— His highneſs's retinue conſiſts of 3 gentlemen of the horſe, 3 valets-de-chambre, and 16 domeſticks in livery. P. Nov. 9.

Yeſterday Mr James Brouſe, citizen and felt-maker, was choſen a ſteward for S. Thomas's hoſpital. D J.

On ſunday laſt there was a great ſtruggle in the Univerſity of Cambridge, about the election of a vice-chancellor, who is the returning officer of that corporation, when the country intereſt carry'd it by a great majority: the poll was, for Dr. Towers 72, for Dr. Long 102. It was remarkable that Dr. Gooch, Maſter of Caius College, in which there are a great number of voters, could get but two to vote with him for the court intereſt. —— We hear from Petersfield in Hants, that on monday laſt, being the anniverſary of our deliverance from popery and wooden ſhoes, the effigies of a certain great man was carried round that town, and afterwards burnt in the bonfire prepared for that day, round which ſtood a vaſt nnmber of people, crying out No Exciſe, Liberty and Property. L E.

Married, a few days ſince, Mr. Warren, ſon of the brigadier general, to Mrs. Humphreys, a widow, whoſe fortune is ſaid to be 30,000 l. S J.

Died, on tueſday, Mr. Dixon, an eminent merchant. —— Mrs. Lucas, oyſter-purveyor to his majeſty. D P. —— On friday, Mr. Sam. Smith, organiſt of Tiverton. W E. —— Yeſterday morning, at her houſe in S. James's place, the right hon. Dame Mary Coote, daughter of the lord Belmour. P.

Friday, Nov. 9. Yeſterday at noon the right hon. the lord chancellor, and all the foreign ambaſſadors, waited on his highneſs the prince of Orange. About two, his highneſs, conducted by Sir Clement Cottrel, maſter of the ceremonies, went to S. James's in one of his majeſty's coaches, and was receiv'd upon the ſtaircaſe by the dukes of Grafton, Montagu, Newcaſtle and Richmond, and the right hon. Sir Rob. Walpole, after which he was conducted by the lord chamberlain to the king's apartment, where his majeſty receiv'd him in a moſt tender and affectionate manner; his highneſs was afterwards conducted by the earl of Grantham, attended by ſeveral perſons of quality, to her majeſty's apartment, where he was introduc'd to the queen, the princeſs royal, and the other princeſſes; his highneſs was afterwards conducted by Sir Clement Cottrel to his royal highneſs the prince of Wales, and then to the duke, to whom having paid his compliments, he came back to the queen's apartments, and ſtaid till about half an hour after three, when he return'd to Somerſet-houſe. Between 6 and 7 his highneſs went incognito to S. James's, and ſupp'd with their majeſties and the royal family, and return'd to Somerſet-houſe between 11 and 12. D A.

His royal highneſs gave 100 guineas to the mariners of the Fubbs yacht, and a rich diamond ring to Sir Charles Hardy. D P.

On ſaturday 3 perſons were cut for the ſtone at Guy's hoſpital, who are all like to do well: proper wards are prepared for a number of both ſexes. P.

Married, a few days ſince in Yorkſhire, Mr. Robert Thornton, a director of the bank, to the ſiſter of Char. Newby, Eſq; a lady of great merit and accompliſhments. D J.

Died yeſterday morning at Batterſea, Mr. Wigmore, formerly an eminent wine-merchant. —— At Twickenham, Sir James Aſh, Knt. he has left 4000 l. per ann. and 20,000 l. in money to Mr. Windham, an eminent linnen draper in Cornhill, and draper in ordinary to his majeſty. C. —— Joſ. Windham, Eſq; of Auſtin-fryars, who marry'd his eldeſt daughter. D P. —— Treaſurer to the ſalt-office. D J.

Saturday, Nov. 10. Yeſterday the right hon. the lord mayor waited on his highneſs the prince of Orange, at his levee at Somerſet-houſe, &c C. —— At noon his highneſs waited on their majeſties at the drawing-room, and the ſame evening was at the drawing-room again. C. P. —— Returned about 12. D J. —— The right hon. the earl of Cheſterfield paid his compliments to his highneſs, who receiv'd him with particular marks of eſteem and affection. D P. —— Lady Mary Montague, daughter of the right hon. earl of Halifax, is appointed neceſſary woman to her royal highneſs, on her nuptials. P.

His majeſty has been pleaſed to order 50 tickets to be ſent to the right hon. the lord mayor, &c. C.

Yeſterday orders were iſſued, that no perſon whatever ſhould be admitted into the gallery and chapel, great miſchief having been done the day before, ſome of the ſconces ſtole, and the hangings tore in ſeveral places. D J.

Laſt night the corpſe of the junior dutcheſs of Marlborough was interr'd in a private manner in Weſtminſter-abbey, near the late earl of Godolphin. C. P. D P.

We have been aſſured, that Mr. Sam. Patrick, one of the candidates for high maſter of S. Paul's ſchool, &c. was born in Worceſterſhire, and is not from Ireland, as hath been induſtriouſly reported. C. D J. —— From hence I think he is from, but not of Ireland.

The laſt letters from Suſſex adviſe, that the court candidates had begun to open their cellars and cupboards, tho' with great reluctancy, a certain indication of the diſtreſſes they are driven to in that part of the kingdom. L E.

We hear that ſeveral of the members who voted for the exciſe, in order to ſecure their elections, have told the freeholders and electors in many places, that the ſcheme ſhall not be brought in again; and that if there is no war, the land-tax perhaps may be taken off, or perhaps the duties on ſoap and candles, (which is ſo oppreſſive to the poor) but in general they receiv'd for anſwer, let us ſee it done firſt. L E.

Some diſputes having aroſe about the lady Elizabeth Seymour's qualification to ſupport the princeſs royal's train, her father being an earl only by courteſy, his majeſty's warrant of privy ſeal paſſed yeſterday the ſignet office, to enable the ſaid lady to be one of the ſupporters, notwithſtanding any impediment to the contrary. S J. — This is contradicted.

Died, laſt night in Hanover-ſquare, the counteſs of Plymouth, mother to the preſent earl, who is about 3 years old. L E.

Monday, Nov. 12. Yeſterday the rev. Dr. Chandler preach'd before their majeſties, his royal highneſs the prince, &c. C. —— The rev. Dr. Lovel. D J. —— The rev. Dr. Edgerton before his royal highneſs the duke, &c. C. D J.

Yeſterday his highneſs the prince of Orange went to the Dutch church in Auſtin Fryers, and after divine ſervice returned to Somerſet houſe, but finding himſelf under ſome ſlight indiſpoſition, ſent a meſſage to their majeſties, to excuſe his coming to court. C. —— His highneſs had not been at the Dutch chapel above half an hour, before he was taken very ill, and return'd immediately to Somerſet-houſe. D P. —— 'Tis ſaid of a pleuriſy in his ſide. D J. —— The marriage is deferr'd on account of his highneſs's being ſlightly indiſpos'd with a cold. P.

There will be no clergy admitted into the chapel at the wedding, but the biſhop of London and the ſubdean. P.

On friday Paul Chamberlayne, Eſq; the ſuppoſed author of a pamphlet, entitled a Word to the Freeholders, was taken into cuſtody by Mr. Hutchins; and on ſaturday he was examined before Charles Delafaye, Eſq; and remanded back for further examination. P.

Sir Iſaac Ratcliffe, the Hyp-Doctor, being ſent for to Verſailles at this phyſical criſis of affairs, to a conſult of the royal phyſicians, on a raſh and a ſcarlet fever in that court, has order'd his nephew, Tyle Stonehouſe, Eſq; of Berkſhire, to ſupply his abſence with a new Paper call'd, The Free Maſon, to be publiſhed to-morrow, and be continu'd weekly. D J. —— I take this news to be falſe. 1. Becauſe the diſtemper of the French court is certainly a chronical diſtemper, and no raſh &c. 2. Becauſe neither German, nor Dutch, nor Engliſh phyſicians could find it out; and therefore the French court would never ſend for any Doctor of either thoſe nations to a conſult. 3. Becauſe I am well aſſured, that they never heard of Sir Iſaac Ratcliffe, the Hyp-Doctor, under any other appellation than that of a Father of the Oratory. 4. Becauſe it is well known, that Sir Iſaac Ratcliffe of Elbow-lane has been a long time out of order, and out at the elbows, and in a conſumption both of body and pocket; ſo that if he be gone abroad he is gone to change the air, and to pay his debts 5. and laſtly, becauſe I am well informed, that at this very inſtant he lies in a very deplorable condition, in a garret at the Sign of the Oratory; where he has been often denied, and has lately taken upon him the name of Tyle Stone-houſe, Eſq; who is a Free-maſon juſt as his brother Walſingham is a Free Briton.

Tuesday, Nov. 13. On ſunday night, his highneſs the prince of Orange being much indiſpoſed, it was fear'd his illneſs would terminate in a pleuriſy, on which he had ſome blood taken away, and having reſted very well that night, found himſelf much better in the morning, being adviſ'd to ſee as little company as poſſible, 'till he was perfectly recovered of the great cold he had taken, through the exceſs of fatigue he had went through ſince his embarking from Holland. C. —— Was much afflicted with a violent pain in the head, and alſo a pleuriſy in the ſide. D J. —— It is believed his illneſs will terminate in an intermitting fever, he having had the ſmall-pox and meaſles. D P. —— He was attended by Dr. Hollings and Dr. Teſſier. P. —— Dr. Tiſſe, the queen's phyſician. D J.

We are informed, that the domeſticks belonging to his majeſty will attend the prince of Orange, and thoſe belonging to the queen, her royal highneſs the princeſs royal; then will follow the knights of the Bath in their order, and the duke of Montagu brings up the rear. —— None of the peers and peereſſes will walk, nor heralds at arms, but they will ſit to ſee the proceſſion. P.

We are aſſured, that one of the king's meſſengers has been waiting near the ſea coaſt ſome time for a gentlewoman coming from France, and at laſt met with one, and has taken her under his care, (on whom he found many letters, but of what conſequence they are, we cannot as yet acquaint the publick) and brought her to town. P. —— A plot ſeems to be abſolutely neceſſary at this time.

We hear, that the patentees, knowing the tryal concerning the right of the theatre-royal in Drury-lane, was to be heard yeſterday in the afternoon, took care in the forenoon to cauſe a warrant to be executed on Mr. Harper, comedian at the Hay-market, with deſign ſo to divide the counſel for the comedians, which were at that time employ'd at Weſtminſter, in vindication of the right of the ſaid theatre. And we further hear, the time allowed Mr. Harper being too ſhort for his counſel to appear in his behalf, he was, by Sir Tho. Clarges, committed to Bridewell, without being heard by counſel. D P. —— Yeſterday came on at the ſittings at the King's-bench at Weſtminſter before the lord chief juſtice York, the tryal on the ejectment brought by the company in the Hay-market againſt the patentees of the theatre royal in Drury-lane, when after hearing the learned arguments on both ſides his lordſhip determin'd it in favour of the Hay-market company: the caſe being (as we hear) thus; The company of the Hay-market took a leaſe of the two truſtees appointed by the thirty-ſix Sharers of Drury-lane houſe; but the ſaid truſtees being willing that the ſaid leaſe ſhould be good both in law and equity, conſulted the ſaid ſharers; and twenty-ſeven out of thirty ſix agreed to the ſaid leaſe; ſo that the ejectment was brought to gain poſſeſſion by virtue of the ſaid leaſe. L E.

Her royal highneſs will be conducted to Chapel between the prince of Wales and the duke; and his highneſs the prince of Orange will walk between the princeſſes Amelia and Caroline. —— We hear the wedding is fix'd for thurſday evening. D A.

Died on monday of a fever, Mr. Theed, an eminent wholeſale hoſier, at the corner of Bread-ſtreet in Cheapſide. P.

Wednesday, Nov. 14. His highneſs the prince of Orange is much recovered; but keeps his chamber, and ſees little company by the adviſe of his phyſicians. C. D P. —— Yeſterday his highneſs received the nobility and gentry as uſual. P. —— The maſquerade that was to have been to-morrow night at the Haymarket is ſuſpended on account of the prince's indiſpoſition. D P. —— We hear the new tickets &c. will bear date for monday next. C. —— The time for the nuptials is not yet fix'd. D A.

A gentlewoman lately taken into cuſtody, on ſuſpicion of carrying on an illicit correſpondence, was yeſterday examin'd at Mr. Delafaye's office, and remanded back for a ſecond examination. D A.

Yeſterday a court of Aldermen returned thanks to the rev. Mr. Gough, for his excellent ſermon on the 5th of November, and deſired him to print it. —— The election of an ordinary of Newgate is put of for a month. C. D P. —— One hundred tickets for the princeſs royal's marriage, were ſent to the lord Mayor. D P. —— My brethren told us firſt 300, then 50. and now 100.

Died laſt week at Lavant, near Chicheſter in Suſſex, Sir Thomas Miller, Bart. and is ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon now Sir John. D A.

From the PEGASUS in Grub-ſtreet.

Mr. Bavius,

If you have e'er a vacant place in your Grub-ſtreet Journal, pleaſe to fill it up with the following queries and anſwers.

Q. Why is your wig like a butcher's ſhop?
A. Becauſe 'tis ſeldom without a calf's head in't.
Q. Why is a tallow candle like Peloponneſus?
A. Becauſe 'tis part of Greece.
Q. Why is a drunken man like Wales?
A. Becauſe he's rocky.
Q. Why is a blackamoor like a conjurer?
A. Becauſe he's a negroe-man-Sir.
Q. Why is a poor man like a milliner?
A. Becauſe he makes ſhifts.
Q. Which has moſt legs, a horſe or no horſe?
A. A horſe has four legs, and no horſe has five.
Q. Why is Bett Woodhouſe like an oat-cake?
A. Becauſe ſhe's toaſted.
Q. Why is a broken tavern like my mother's kitchen table?
A. Becauſe it has no drawers.

Q. Why is a fart like a double entendre?
A. Becauſe it may be taken in two ſenſes.
Q. What's a man in a barren deſart iſland like?
A. Like to ſtarve.
Q. Pray what's my name?

Thy dreadful trage-comedy!
Where Patent reaps, in vain the Players ſow.
Delightful change: Hay-market now
Outrides the tempeſt with a ſmiling brow.

No hopeful actor ſpoil'd
Deforms theatric field,
Nor frighted gameſter dreads a main;
While right and law conſpire
To give bold PISTOL fire,
Nor Son, nor Father ſhines in vain.

Recitativo.

As pleaſing is the ſcene, H—M—RE,
To hear with R—CH and E—L—S roar:
So patent ſounds from terror free,
Aſſiſtant to our joys ſhall be.

C H O R U S

Awake the trumpet, beat the brazen drum,
And let the jovial noiſe,
Give ſignal to the bum,
And bag-pipes voice;
The well-ſqueez'd bag-pipe to the skies,
Great C—B—R's fame,
Parent of Lyric lays
On birth and new-years days,
Proclaim.

MÆVIUS.

We have received a ballad call'd The wencher cuckold, or The Surry tale; a letter ſigned HAMILLA; another from ÆSCULAPIUS; a third concerning Mrs. OSBORNE and her aſs-man; a copy of verſes to COLLEY CIBBER, Eſq; and a translation from PETRONIUS, ſigned EUSEBIUS. And we beg the favour of our correſpondents to leave to our diſcretion the publication or ſuppreſſion of their pieces, without inſiſting upon our reaſons for the latter; which we apprehend can be neither agreeable to them, nor entertaining to the public.

FOREIGN NEWS.

THURSEAY, Nov. 8. —— Petersbourg, Oct. 26. A courier from Perſia brings advice, that the Perſian general has gotten together a new army of 80,000 men, with which he means to riſque a ſecond battle with the Ottoman forces. D P.

WILLIAM HENDERSON,

WHO, by the Bleſſing of God, cures Cancers, Kings-Evils, Wens, polypus, and Excreſcences of the Fleſh of any Kind upon any part of the human Body. He performs his Cures without cutting or ſpilling of Blood; takes away the Roots though ever ſo ſmall and fibrous, and recovers the parts to ſound Fleſh.

He hath performed many great Cures, not only in America, but ſince his Arrival in London, (which was in December laſt) particularly,

1. Capt. George Pitt of a Fleſh-Wen, which he had 14 Years behind his Ankle, the Root whereof extended to the Bone; who may be apply'd to at the Jeruſalem Coffee-Houſe in Exchange-Alley for Information. Alſo, 2. The Daughter of Oliver Hallowell, a Child of nine Months old, of an Excreſcence on its Mouth as large as a Mutton-Kidney, which he hath taken away, and reſtored its Mouth to its natural Form. The Child may be ſeen in Token-houſe Yard, near Lothbury. 3. Henry Spratley, in Field-Lane, Holborn, of a large polypus on his Noſe. He hath cured others ſince his Arrival, and hath ſeveral now under Cure.

He alſo cureth the Ague and Fever without the Bark; as alſo the Gout, where old Age, Decrepidneſs and Chalks do not prevent: And giveth Eaſe to ſuch as are not curable.

N. B. He giveth Advice in phyſick gratis; takes no Fees from the poor, but the rich pay according to their Abilities; and, if they pleaſe, may agree before-hand: If no Cure is performed, no pay is required.

He gives Attendance at his Lodgings, in Falcon-Court, Lothbury, every Morning till twelve a Clock.
